Many women helped during WWI.
They worked for a Christian group called the Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army helped soldiers in WW1. Most helpers were women.

The women made food for soldiers.

The women made donuts. Today National Donut Day is a day to remember the Salvation Army.

on, and what sort of place we had stuck for a start...
 We had very little to do on the ship and a long time to do it in. Old He has proved himself a real pig so far. He still thinks he has a lot of schoolchildren under him. I believe he is getting shifted from us, and a damned good job of it is. I am sure more of the men will be very.
 The tucker was very bad after we left Ceylon, and the men started to complain to the officer. They took me under the table and went to the bank. I got some rotten fish that was served to them for breakfast.
 They told the men that it was quite good enough for them, so they took it straight up to the Doctor & he condemned it at once, and ordered more breakfast for them. The Officer did fish & fowl, fruit, turkey, fish and everything like a big hotel. I am pretty sure half of them will never come back if we see a bit of a scrap. While we were between Ceylon & Aden, some of the chaps got down the hold amongst the beer.
 They weren't found out for some time, and had some cigars furnished for them when they were caught. One chap got 25 days in "black" for it, and that is all that was done to them. Another day they got a gimlet out of the Carpenter's room, and bored open the door of the beer room, on deck and took 40 gallons. They would not have been found out, only they forgot to plug the last cork up, and it ran out all over the deck.
 They were found out who it was, but they stopped all the beer for the rest of the trip. You will see in Dad's letters how they all broke ships here, and went into town.
 I'de allright here, and always had plenty of tucker & extras on board. We used to get hot rolls from the baker in the morning & I used to make tea or cocoa, and we used to have Cocoa before we went to bed.

The women helped soldiers send letters home.

The women helped people who were hurt.

The women gave soldiers water.

The Salvation Army still helps people all over the world.

The Salvation Army has thrift stores. The money from the stores helps people.
